INSPIRING GREATNESS THROUGH DEPENDABILITY AND TRUST

Dependability as a personal characteristic can be defined as the quality of being reliable. So a question follows.....reliable to do what?

What do we rely on seeing in others and what do others rely on seeing in us? These reliable mindsets and behaviors we and others exhibit directly impacts levels of trust which define relationships.

Join us in November as we delve into Dependable Leadership.

TELECOMMUTING WITH CHILDREN

On Tuesday afternoons, a wonderful group of dedicated caregivers, who happen to also be UT employees participate in weekly conversation and support.

Jeannie Jones Tennant, L&OD Consultant, leads thoughtful, supportive and timely conversation around unique circumstances for employees who have children at home. These sessions engage in the exploration of strategies and ideas that support the creation of a positive environment for everyone.

We would love to have you join. Dates and times can be found on page 1.

MONTHLY MINDSET

"If we are not challenged we are not growing"

Dr. Dorian McCoy, reaffirmed this during our Lunch and Learn session on Difficult Conversations. As we consider difficult conversations we remember that when our thoughts are challenged we strive for mutual understanding in order to learn and grow. Thank you Dorian!
